

World Health Organization (WHO) & Predecessors

The World Health Organization was founded in 1948. Its predecessor organizations were the International Health Office in Paris and the Health Section in Geneva, both part of the League of Nations, and the Pan American Sanitary Bureau in Washington, DC, the predecessor of the WHO Regional Office for the Americas. The World Health Assembly, the governing body of WHO, meets annually. The Headquarters of WHO are in Geneva, Switzerland.

In 1948, the Pan American Sanitary Organization integrated into WHO and became the WHO Regional Organization for the Americas, which continued to have its headquarters in Washington, DC. Thereafter an annual session of the WHO Regional Committee for the Americas (RCA) was held, and every fourth of these was also the Pan American Sanitary Conference (PASC). The Conference is the supreme Governing Body of the WHO Region for the Americas.
